orientations preparing me for my study abroad experience through Bellarmine University. I also have been made aware not only of the joys, but also of the hardships and dangers associated with study abroad. I am aware that there are cultural differences in every country and that behavior that may be considered acceptable or safe in the United States may not be acceptable or safe in my host country. I fully accept these dangers and hardships at my own free will.

I have carefully read the pre-departure materials and the Bellarmine Release Form. I am aware that I am subject to the Bellarmine code of conduct, as stated in the student handbook, in addition to the code of conduct at my host study site, and accept to abide by both.

Students who are participating in a semester or academic year study abroad experience have also been provided with the NAFSA "What Parents Need to Know" guide as well as the study abroad pre-departure orientation manual.

I understand that it is my responsibility to share information and pertinent materials about my study abroad experience with my parent or guardian.
