GENERAL RESUME INFORMATION

Before preparing a resume, analyze your interests, values and skills. You will find this information helpful when you begin to determine what information you want to include in your resume.

Recognizing accomplishments you helped others achieve greatly enhances your resume. Keep in mind that you may include accomplishments that were made while you were a part of a "team." In this regard, looking at the larger picture of your involvement is important.

In reflecting on your past experiences (e.g., home, school, hobbies, volunteer placements, etc.), it would be helpful for you to pinpoint activities that are specifically relevant to the type of position you are seeking. The more you can focus your past experiences toward a goal, the more powerful your resume will become.

A resume can be considered as a sales promotion tool with your background as the product. It is not necessary that you include every job you have held. When possible, attempt to present your past experiences in a manner that make them relevant to your position objective.

Salary information should not be included on your resume. The same is true of height, weight, marital status, and other personal information. Normally, you should not use personal pronouns in a resume. Sentences should begin with an action verb whenever possible.

It is suggested that you also place nearest the top of your resume the strongest information in reference to your position objective. In addition, place the most important and/or powerful material near the top of each section of your resume.

Give your resume a KISS (Keep it Short and Simple):

- ◆ Try to limit your resume to one page.
- ◆ Keep sentences brief, under 12 words.
- ◆ Use simple, everyday language.
- ◆ Be honest -- don't exaggerate.
- ◆ Be specific and give examples.
- ◆ Be positive and enthusiastic.

Resumes on the Internet

Submitting your resume to be considered for a position with a company or at a web site where it can be previewed by a company can be done on the internet. Before you decide to submit your resume to a job search service or resume database, ask yourself these important questions: What type of confidentiality will you have? How long will your information remain in the service provider's database? How will the employer access the database? When you send a resume or application directly to an employer who has listed with a service provider or through the company home page, you should: (1) confirm the company's e-mail address before sending your information, and (2) obtain mailing address and phone number of the potential employer.

Resumes for Computerized Resume Searches by Optical Character Recognition (OCR)

Occasionally, employers electronically scan (also referred to as a computerized resume search) resumes in order to process a greater amount of resumes in a shorter period of time. If it is possible that your resume is going to be scanned, you should take certain precautions in creating your resume (i.e., specific margins and fonts should be used).

The steps to process a resume in a computerized resume database utilizing an OCR are: (1) the resume is scanned by a computer and each resume is placed in an appropriate database file depending upon the keywords that it reads in the resume, (2) resumes are categorized by job possibilities and applicants are ranked for those positions, (3) the computer generates letters of rejection or interview offers, and (4) the computer stores the actual resume for future job openings.

If there is a possibility that your resume is going to be scanned by a prospective employer, further information about this specific type of resume can be obtained from Electronic Resume Revolution, a book published in 1994 by Joyce Lain Kennedy and Thomas J. Morrow. A copy of this book is located in the Bellarmine University Career Center Library.

SECTION HEADINGS

The purpose of a section heading is to describe the topic of that section in one or two words. Once again, it is important that you determine what information will be most relevant to your position objective so that this information can be included. It is suggested that you begin the body of your resume with an "OBJECTIVE," followed closely by "EDUCATION" and "EXPERIENCE." Also, remember to use resume layout formats (1) one or (3) three.

Some Section Heading Suggestions:

Objective	Summary of Qualifications	Hobbies and Interests
Relevant Education	Extracurricular Activities	Publications
Relevant Experience	Other Experience	Awards and Honors
Computer Skills	Other Education	Research

The following are examples of section headings and specific information that may be included:

HEADING: Objective

- Technical writing, utilizing computer-generated presentation
- Industrial design position in progressive CADD atmosphere
- Beginning level position in geriatric social work
- Electronic control system maintenance and repair
- Pre-school teaching position in a progressive system
- Full-time position related to educational preparation in business
- Internship or part-time position in accounting

Position objectives should succinctly state your purpose in seeking a particular position. Objectives also contain hints of relevant experiences in your past that uniquely qualify you for the position. The rest of the resume will be devoted to providing supporting evidence of your qualifications for the position you seek.

HEADING: Education

Bellarmine University: Louisville, KY
Pursuing a Bachelor of Arts with a major in Communications
Expected date of degree: May 2000
Cumulative GPA: 3.5

Most resumes should contain a section on educational background. When you are first pursuing a professional career, education should normally be the next heading you include after your objective. Later, work experience is more important. As a general rule, include your GPA if it is 3.0 or above. If you are including your GPA, you may choose to list either your cumulative or major GPA (it is usually best to include the higher of the two).

HEADING: Computer Skills

You may or may not choose to include this section in your resume. It is recommended that students majoring in Computer Science, Computer Information Systems, Accounting, Math, Business, and other similar majors include this section. It is especially important to include this section if the position you are seeking requires that you be familiar with computers. Do not, however, exaggerate on your computer skills -- you may regret it later. As a general rule, use one of the following three phrases to describe your skill level in working with a certain program and/or application: (1) familiar with, (2) knowledge of, or (3) proficient in. For example, if you have received formal training (e.g., course or workshop) on Microsoft Word, you may consider yourself to have a "knowledge of" that program. If you have received formal training and know how to perform a majority of the complex operations in MSWord, you may consider yourself to be "proficient in" Microsoft Word. When deciding how skilled you are in a particular program, keep in mind that employers may require that you take a skills test to determine your level of proficiency. For suggestions on how to structure this section, please see the sample resumes in this booklet.

HEADING: Work Experience

Your work experience doesn't have to be relevant to your position objective, but if it is, you may want to title it "RELEVANT EXPERIENCE" and cover a third or more of your resume with the information. Experienced job seekers will probably want to place this section directly beneath the objective section. Less relevant work experiences can be placed lower in the section, or you may choose to include another section titled "OTHER EXPERIENCE."

Items in this section should be placed in chronological order, beginning with your most recent position. You may choose to bold, underline, or use ALL CAPS to allow certain phrases to stand out. Keep in mind, however, that each position listing should be consistent throughout the section. (e.g., if you bold the position title for one of your work experiences, you should bold the position title in subsequent work experience listings). You should then list, either with bullets or in paragraph form, your responsibilities. Be sure to include your accomplishments. Be specific and descriptive. Make all "EXPERIENCE" sections similar in style (i.e., be consistent). It is suggested that you begin sentences, or sentence fragments, with an action verb (see suggested action verbs in this booklet). Avoid using personal pronouns.

HEADING: Profile, Additional Education & Experience, Internship, Field Experience, etc.

Many people choose to include sections that highlight experiences, training, personal traits that relate specifically to the career field they are planning to enter. Most professional programs such as Nursing or Education require a section highlighting their professional training.

Success with Online Applications

Paper application forms are a traditional recruitment tool for large employers. Typical graduate forms ask for details of qualifications and work experience, along with competence-based questions such as 'give an example of a time when you solved a complex problem?' Forms are used as the first stage of a process to screen out those candidates who do not meet the recruiter's basic requirements. For popular graduate recruiters, only the minority result in an interview.

Paper-based forms are expensive to print and administer and recent business research suggests that increasing numbers of employers are considering online forms as an alternative.

Many employers now offer their forms online and some have made this the only method of application. This offers them a cheap and easy way of providing access to their application process and the option to use pre-selection software if they so wish.

Receiving applications in electronic form has given employers and recruitment agencies the option to use software to pre-select the most suitable candidates. In the USA such software has been in use for several years and is sold to large corporations to reduce their costs.

The companies who produce such software are understandably secretive about exactly how it works, but some broad information is available. It is known that such software works rather like internet search engines by searching for particular keywords or phrases. The employer is able to specify keywords and call up and rank applicants whose CVs include them.

One other variation on this software is 'spiders' or 'crawlers' which are used by some employment agencies to search the web, either for vacancies that match particular applicants' keywords, or for CVs that include the keywords important to their client employers. These work like specialized versions of popular search engines, in that they only search for certain types of documents, or in certain places where CVs are posted.

Writing applications for robots is not radically different from writing applications for humans and it is important to remember that although your application in the early stages may need to get through software pre-selection, later decisions will be made by people. For any type of application it is important that you:

- analyze the requirements of the job
- list your evidence that you meet each requirement
- put your evidence into the format of the application

How to Deal with Online Forms:

- ❖ Give online forms the same level of care and attention as paper-based forms. Candidates may fall into the trap of treating online applications less seriously or formally than paper-based applications. The psychology behind this is unclear, but it may be due to electronic media seeming more immediate and less permanent than print-based media. Don't fall into this trap - recruiters will not be expecting lower standards from their online applicants.
- ❖ Take a copy of the form, or note down the headings, sections and questions. You will then be able to plan your application offline.
- ❖ Analyze the requirements of the employer and vacancy. The recruiter will be clear on what they are looking for in terms of qualifications, experience, skills, and personal qualities. They will pre-select on how well your application matches these requirements. They may even use software to do some of this for them. The vacancy may give many of the requirements and the employer's website may give an indication of skills and qualities the company looks for in its employees. It is common for those completing a period of education to place too much emphasis on qualifications and too little on skills. Make sure that your application stresses your skills as much as your qualifications and experience.
- ❖ List your evidence that you meet each of the employer's requirements. Any of us can claim to have excellent communication, team work and negotiating skills - to give weight to our claims, we need to give examples of when we have used those skills.
- ❖ Work out where, within the form, you can include your evidence of meeting the requirements. Some questions may ask specifically about one requirement, for example, 'Describe an occasion when you worked successfully as a member of a team'. Other evidence may have to be worked into more 'open' sections of the form, for example, 'other information'.
- ❖ Create a text file using your word-processor or Windows Notepad and use it to write your entries for the form, separating each section by a line-break.
- ❖ Spell-check your answers and get someone else to check for spelling, grammar and general comments - you will not be able to see your own mistakes.
- ❖ Once you are happy with your answers, go back online and navigate to the online form. Open your text file and copy and paste your answers into the correct sections. Don't use 'cut' as you may be able to recycle your answers for another form. Check the form carefully and when you are completely happy with it, submit it.
- ❖ Save your text file, give it a sensible name that you will recognize, like HP application, and make a backup copy of it. You will almost certainly be able to recycle its contents in other online or paper applications.

Cover Letter Refresher Course
10 Tips for Crafting Eye-Catching Cover Letters
by Peter Newfield

(President of resume writing service Career Resumes)

<http://resume.monster.com/coverletter/refresher/>

Your cover letter presents your intentions, qualifications and availability to a prospective employer in a succinct and appealing format. As your first chance to make a great impression, a personalized letter indicates you are serious about your job search. Your resume can give the nitty-gritty of dates, places of employment and education, but your cover letter must entice the reader to consider you amidst hundreds, or even thousands of candidates for any one job opening.

1. Do You Really Need a Cover Letter?

You bet! Just as you would never show up unannounced at a prospective employer's door, your resume should never just appear solo on a decision maker's desk. Your cover letter is your first opportunity to introduce yourself, present your qualifications and show the search committee you are a potential candidate for the advertised position.

2. Personalize it to the Company

Anyone can reproduce a "canned" cover letter and hope for the best. Instead, take a few minutes to personalize your letter to show a company you are serious about working there. State the reason for your interest in the company. Show that you have done your homework by mentioning company specifics such as a department, a new project or a recent acquisition. Address the cover letter to a specific individual whenever possible.

3. Why Are You Sending Your Resume and Cover Letter?

Cover letters should be clear and to the point. Include the specific job title, two to three reasons why your experience makes a good fit and a brief outline of your career highlights.

4. Highlight Your Strengths

You may be a great person and never call in sick, but prospective employers really want to know why they should consider you for this position. Brag a little! Give a few facts, list relevant skills and state accomplishments on recent jobs that will be impressive.

Examples:

- Increased overseas sales by 93 percent.
- Negotiated new financial leases or loans.
- Implemented new training programs that reduced staff turnover by 15%.

5. State Your Intentions and Qualifications Right Up Front

Don't expect a senior personnel manager or recruiter to wade through a mishmash of information on your cover letter before understanding why you are sending your resume.

6. What Makes You Different?

Emphasize your skills, talents and experiences to show how you would be a valuable addition to the team. If you have relevant volunteer or professional experience, mention it briefly in your cover letter. For example, if you are an accountant who serves as volunteer treasurer for a nonprofit community health organization, include that information. Or if you are an international sales rep who has lived in Europe and Asia and speaks several languages, add that to your letter.

7. No Negative Information

Never include personality conflicts with previous employers, pending litigation suits or sarcastic remarks in your cover letter. If you are bad-mouthing your present place of employment, interviewers may fear a repeat performance if they hire you.

8. When Should You Include Salary And/Or Relocation Information?

The rule of thumb is to always include salary requirements and/or salary history in the cover letter if a prospective employer requests it. For example, you could write: "My salary requirements are $60,000-$75,000 (negotiable)." Or you might write: "My current salary is $53,000 at XYZ corporation." Eliminating this information from your cover letter may justify your resume getting tossed out. Never include salary and relocation information on your resume – only address this information in your cover letter.

9. Take Action Steps

Take a proactive approach in your cover letter. State the fact that you are available for a personal interview; give your home, work, email and/or cell phone numbers where you can be reached; note that you will follow up by phone (whenever possible) to provide any additional information required.

10. Be Direct!

A professionally written cover letter and resume can open the door to your next position on the corporate ladder or to a new career in a different field. A clean, error-free presentation, combined with phrasing and solid facts, will encourage the reader to review the attached resume and call you in for an interview.

January 16, 2001

Ms. Dianne C. Strand
Manager of Human Resources
Kentucky Industries, Inc.
2900 Boulevard
Louisville, KY 40207

Dear Ms. Strand:

I am applying for the position of systems analyst which was advertised on December 18 with Career Center at Bellarmine University. The position appears to fit very well with my education, experience, and career interests.

My background and career goals seem to match your job requirements well. I am confident that I can perform the job effectively. Furthermore, I am genuinely interested in the position and in working for Kentucky Industries. Your firm has an excellent reputation and comes highly recommended to me.

With a major in management information systems, I have training on mainframes, minicomputers, and microcomputers as well as with a variety of software programs and applications. My practical experience in my university's computer center as a programmer, and as a student consultant for system users, gave me valuable exposure to complex computer operations. Additionally, I worked as a cooperative education student in computing operations for a large bank where I gained knowledge of financial systems. My enclosed resume provides more details on my qualifications.

I appreciate your consideration of my request for a personal interview to discuss my qualifications further, and to learn more about this opportunity. I can be reached at (502) 683-4388.

PROSPECTING LETTER

225 Hampton Boulevard
Louisville, KY 40225
January 16, 2001

Mr. Timothy T. Mellon
Director of College Recruiting
Midwest Mercantile Company
4500 Randolph Drive
Chicago, IL 40207

Dear Mr. Mellon:

I read your company's description in CPC's Job Choices in Business and would like to inquire about employment opportunities in your management training program. I want to work in retail management and would like to relocate to the Chicago area after graduation.

I will graduate this May with a degree in Business Administration. My interest in business started in Junior Achievement while in high school and developed further through a variety of sales and retail positions during college. My internship with a large department store convinced me to pursue a career in retail. When I researched the top retailers in Chicago, Midwest Mercantile emerged as having a strong market position, an excellent training program, and a reputation for excellent customer service. In short, you provide the kind of professional retail environment I seek.

My resume is enclosed for your consideration. My education and experience match the qualifications you seek in your management trainees, but they don't tell the whole story. I know from customer and supervisor feedback that I have the interpersonal skills and motivation needed to build a successful career in retail management. And my relatively extensive experience gives me confidence in my career direction and in my abilities to perform competently.

Certified Public Accountants
1400 Walnut Street
Louisville, KY 40202

Dear Ms. Kennedy:

Ms. Mary Smith, professor of accounting at Bellarmine University, suggested that I contact you. She thought that you would be in an excellent position as an alumna to assist me with a career decision.

As an accounting student, I am exploring which career path to pursue. Public accounting, management accounting, and IRS work all sound interesting to me at this point, but I would like to get your advice on the long-term career implications of each path as well as a better handle on the day-to-day activities of a CPA.

I have enclosed a copy of my resume so you have my background information as it relates to our meeting. I will call you next week to see if I can arrange a brief meeting with you at your convenience. Thank you for considering my request.

Sincerely yours,

Janis K. English
