I would study abroad for a whole semester rather than a month in the summer!

Major(s): Economics

Years/Term Abroad: Summer 2014

KIIS Denmark- I chose this program because it offered unique courses and a once in a life time opportunity to visit a country that I had close to no previous knowledge of.

The first was a hostel that was in a park removed from downtown Copenhagen, but was nice and clean. The second was less nice, but was located in downtown Aarhus.

By far my best memory was exploring Copenhagen on my first day, and finding my new favorite spot in the whole world- Nyhavn, which is an awesome little port with lots of boats and colorful buildings.

Despite the fact that I was in a country where English was very common, Denmark challenged me to not think like an American and to solve problems from a different view.

Greatest Challenge: I am horrible with directions- so figuring out a metro system in a huge city was difficult!

I could not believe how similar everyone looked in Denmark. It was crazy how little diversity I saw there compared to at home.

I didn't realize how poorly America deals with certain problems, and how efficiently many other countries (especially Denmark) solves complex issues.

Get outside your comfort zone. Go a place where you don't know anyone- you'll get the most out of your experience that way!

Denmark opened up to me a world that I never knew existed and changed me forever.
